JACKSON CITY

Jackson, often referred to as 'Jackson Hole,' has a unique town square that features arches made of elk antlers at each corner. These antler arches have become iconic symbols of the town and are a popular spot for visitors to take pictures. The antlers are collected from the nearby National Elk Refuge, making them a distinctive and natural part of Jackson's charm.

A group of motorcyclists is gathered on a paved road that winds through a lush, green forest. The scene is captured from a low angle, looking down the road. In the foreground, a man in a black leather jacket and helmet sits on a red motorcycle on the left, and another man in a black leather jacket and helmet sits on a black motorcycle on the right. In the background, several other motorcyclists are visible, some on sport bikes and others on touring bikes. The forest is dense with tall trees and vibrant green foliage, with sunlight filtering through the canopy. The overall atmosphere is one of camaraderie and outdoor adventure.
